

BIG BOOM IS ON AT RAMSEY

Members of the Ramsey townsite company spent last night and part of today in Dayton filing plats and publication notices, completing incorporation and other work incident to the location of a new mining camp.

Work is going on in the new camp with feverish activity. Nearly every mining man that could leave Virginia City has made a trip to the new camp and many have remained. The roads to Ramsey are lined with teams and vehicles of all sorts rushing into the new camp.

Two new stores were opened there yesterday and a big blacksmith shop has been set up in the open. The work on the water plant is being rushed, and every company that has shipping ore on the surface and nearly all of them have it, is engaged in digging out and sacking ore for shipment to the mill.

It is stated by men who are not given to booming without foundation, that pinnings from almost every gulch in the proven district return from $20 to $200 to the ton.

Virginia City people and papers have wakened to the fact that there is something doing at Ramsey. The following is from the Chronicle of yesterday:

"There was a large exodus from here yesterday for the district including Ed. and Arnold Klaus, Tom Carney, Ed. Doherty, George Hester, Geo. Cummings, Leo Blake, John Foley, Jas. Ennis and a party of four strangers. George Wright and Frank Devaney left for Badger district yesterday to complete some locations owned by the former.

"Sheriff Quirk, County Treasurer W. V. Ryan, Con Ahern and Secretary of State Douglas left in the latter's Pope Toledo onto yesterday afternoon to ascertain what part of the district is in this county.

"Dennis McMahon, Dan Morgan and James Conlan left yesterday afternoon for Ramsey.

"Wellington Werrin and Undertaker Kuhn will leave this morning to get a business location. Sol. Rosenbaum, Ed. Benner, William Cocking and Tom Berry will also leave this morning.

"Ben Wade has purchased all the canvass in this city and will leave as soon as possible to start a general merchandise store in Ramsey, and will carry on the business in a large tent.

"Tom Short, R. D. Bravin and Tom Williams will leave for the new district today.

George Barton rented all the rigs he had in Dayton yesterday, and had to refuse offers of liberal amounts for transportation to Ramsey.

"Dr. Hodgins and Ed. Hancock returned from Ramsey about half-past 10 o'clock last night and said that pinetop tents were pitched at that place. Parties horned ore all along the Clark strike, and at every point gold was found. The Ramseys have about 150 claims and are doing holding work on all of them. Steps have been taken to have the telephone line extended from this city to the new district. The best road to the district is out over the flat to the old Stockton station and then up the canyon to the mines, the grade by this route being gradual and the roadway in fine condition. Dr. Hodgins says the district is the finest mineralized country he ever saw."

RAILROAD FOR MANHATTAN

An item appearing in the Manhattan News, last issue, is reprinted for what it is worth in the Appeal.

"Official confirmation from the headquarters of the Southern Pacific company of the rumor that Manhattan is to be afforded railroad connections was received here yesterday and is a subject of general satisfaction throughout the camp. The Southern Pacific company contemplates, either the purchase of the Austin railroad or the construction of a parallel line from Wells to that point, thence south to Manhattan and later south to Tonopah and Goldfield. In either event it seems probable that trains will be running into this camp before snow flies.

"For some time past the Southern Pacific people have been negotiating for the purchase of the Austin railroad, but in order to be prepared for eventualities it is announced that they have completed surveys for a competing line and the material for the new road has been ordered. The culmination of the plans will give an immediate outlet for the immense ore tonnage of this district and will establish a competing line with the Tonopah railway which has long enjoyed the monopoly of the transportation business of the mining camps of Southern Nevada.

"There is also a strong probability that 'Borax' Smith will seek an outlet for the road he is now building in the Bullfrog country by way of Goldfield, Tonopah and Manhattan. Smith was in this section recently and with his engineers made an inspection of the routes available for railway purposes, the party journeying well over into the Smokey Valley country. Little is known here regarding Mr. Smith's plans, but it is stated he contemplates tapping Manhattan and Round Mountain from thence to extend his road across Smokey Valley to a connection with the main line of the Western Pacific.

DOG TAG FOUND IN CAN OF BEEF

DISAPPEARANCE OF A CANINE EXPLAINED WHEN METAL LICENSE TAG IS DISCOVERED IN A TIN CAN OF PACKING HOUSE MEAT.

CHICAGO, July 18.—The mysterious disappearance of a Chicago dog whose license number was 13,596, has been solved, but the identity of the owner remains a subject of doubt.

The dog may have met an inglorious finish in a can of pressed food sent out from Chicago. The can has been found at Roxbury, Va., according to a telegram from that place, and while the dog itself was not identified at all, its metallic license tag was intact and bore the words: "No. 13,596, Chicago—R. F. C."

According to the municipal record this number has been worn by more than 20 canines. Some of the dogs are alive and kicking, others are gone. The neighbors know not where, and it was evidently one of these that finally landed down in Virginia.

HOW THEY JOLLIED NICK

LONDON, July 18.—Although Congressmen and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth were royally entertained while in England, and declared that they had the time of their lives, there is a feeling among the American residents here that "Nick" at least, heaved a large-sized sigh of relief when they went to Paris.

Because you see, "Nick" has been "decidedly" worried because the average Englishman could not, or would not, see how it is that he will not succeed his august father-in-law as president of the United States.

Time after time the president's son-in-law tried to explain that the "right of succession" does not hold good in the United States, but his efforts were not successful in making the matter clear to the British mind, and many a Briton assured him that he understood how it was, but "suppose you will assume your wife's name when you assume the rank to which your marriage entitles you, don'tcher know."

He was persistently addressed as "senator," although he tried his best to disown the title, but the Briton evidently had never heard the word "representative," and continued to call him "senator."

One member of the house of commons is so sure, in his own mind, that Longworth will succeed Roosevelt that he lost no opportunity to urge him to adopt the English scheme of "a responsible ministry, when he came into his office, and told him he would be only too glad to cross the water and help him get it started.

HOW "SHORTY" KINKEAD PUNCHED JACKSON

Monday morning there arrived on the local train a tall well built man whom old timers at once recognized "Shorty Kinkead" the man who years ago met the redoubtable Peter Jackson in a boxing bout.

Kinkead was named "Shorty" by the boys at the car shops, where he worked, because of his great night, which was considerably over six feet. He was also something of a boxer and it was a well rooted idea in the shops that the man who ever got hit with Shorty's right never smiled again.

When Peter Jackson came here in the height of his prowess he challenged all comers, and Shorty was selected as the proper man to knock his block off.

After the matter was considered however in his various hearings the Carson authorities became alarmed and suggested that the meeting take place in Virginia City, for they had an idea if Jackson got killed in Carson it might queer it as a sporting town.

The meeting was therefore billed for the Comstock and even then the Comstock authorities exacted a solemn promise from Shorty that he would not forget himself and use his terrible right on Jackson. Shorty promised and several of his friends personally went security for his word.

Well the bout took place in the opera house and the house was jammed, for a good many people figured that Shorty would get excited and let his right go in an unguarded moment, kill Jackson then and there, and the sight would well be worth a dollar and a half.

Both men were there on time and their appearance on the stage was a hint to the audience that an ovation was in order, and they got it.

"Don't forget about that right punch," was the admonition from the gallery as Peter Jackson walked up to his man, and, while looking at his jaw changed his mind and hit him in the stomach. Then Jackson sailed another blow in the stomach with his left changing his mind again swatted Shorty in the eye. Jackson had a queer habit of starting out to hit a man in one place and then suddenly recollecting that he had business elsewhere would bluff him in some other portion of his anatomy. He never seemed really to know where he was going to land when he started, he sort of drifted in, but he always got there.

By the time he had gone at Shorty in this vacillating manner for about two rounds, and had raised lumps all over him, Shorty got so mad that he made up his mind that he would double cross the authorities and hit Jackson with his right any how, and trust to a sympathetic coroner's jury to let him down easy, in which event he would only be stuck for Jackson's funeral expenses.

While he was figuring what those funeral expenses might be with an economical undertaker, he got a few more wallops and then he liberated his right. A second before Jackson had let off swatting him, and was beginning to make one of his short arm talks to the audience.

Shorty landed on the side of his head with that iron right arm and the full weight of his body behind the blow, and Jackson, doubling up like a jack knife (with laughter) continued to talk to the audience. Then Shorty lost his temper and began landing on Jackson's hard head with his right and Jackson continued chatting with audience, as if unaware of the fact that Shorty was still there.

The audience began to howl and Shorty retired to the side scenes when taking off his right glove he found that he had put all his knuckles out of commission trying to beat the side of Jackson's head in.

Shorty carried his right hand in a sling for nearly a month and said that he would rather try to break up a V. & T. box car with his fist, than Jackson.

GET NEXT TO YOURSELVES

Some elements in this State seem determined to egg on and stir up trouble in Tonopah between the union men and the mine operators.

The operators agreed on a wage scale last month to go into force Aug. 1. The new scale is under discussion between the miners and the operators, and it is said that the two will come together on an agreement before the first of August without any trouble.

Pessimistic articles and talks by persons who show little judgment do no good, and in fact tend always to create false impressions and trouble. It is to be hoped that the operators and miners will conclude their business without paying any attention to outside statements, that only tend to inflame and to destroy good feeling. The unions are strong enough to attend to their own business themselves.
